Disabling via browser

From the site <http://www.youronlinechoices.com/it/> it is possible not only to acquire further information on cookies, but also to check the installation of cookies on your browser/device and also to disable them.

Commonly used browsers (e.g., Internet Explorer, Firefox, Chrome, Safari) accept cookies by default, but this setting can be changed by the user at any time. This applies to both PCs and mobile devices such as tablets and smartphones: it is a generally and widely supported feature.

Therefore, cookies can easily be deactivated or disabled by accessing the options or preferences of the browser used and generally only third party cookies can be blocked; in general, these options will only take effect for that browser and on that device, unless options are active to unify preferences on different devices. Specific instructions can be found on the options or help page of the browser itself. Disabling technical cookies, however, may affect the full and/or proper functioning of various sites, including this Site.

As a rule, the browsers used today:

- offer a "Do not track" option, which is supported by some (but not all) websites. As a result, some websites may no longer collect certain browsing data;

- offer the option of anonymous or incognito browsing: this means that no data will be collected in the browser and no browsing history will be saved, but browsing data will still be collected by the operator of the website visited;
- allow the deletion of all or part of the stored cookies, but on a new visit to a website they might be installed.
- We indicate the links to the support pages of the most popular browsers (with instructions on how to disable cookies on these browsers):

In these cases, personal data will still be processed in compliance with European legislation. The transfer of data, in particular, will only take place in compliance with the provisions of Articles 45 et seq. of the GDPR.
